Chairman's Budget News

As part of the budget negotiations this year, the House Republican Caucus will be pushing hard to get some needed reforms to our budget process. We have five bills which will improve the transparency and accountability of our budget. These bills are not in response to the current governor, but rather improvements that have been needed for years.

- House Bill 920 by Rep. Stan Saylor would set a reasonable time limit on the waivers before the funds lapse and return to the State Treasury. Further, this legislation would prohibit using waived funds for the creation of a new or expanded program or initiative.
- House Bill 921 by Rep. Eric Nelson would require that quarterly reports be issued by the administration on the amount committed and awarded from special funds that are used to provide grants and subsidies. This will improve the ability of the legislature to exercise oversight over the funds.
- House Bill 922 by Rep. Sherly Delozier would require the Governor to present legislative language in the annual budget proposal process. This is intended to address the fact that in recent years substantial portions of the Governor's proposals are never actually presented to the legislature in legislative form.
- House Bill 923 by Rep. Rosemary Brown would improve the legislature's ability to evaluate supplemental appropriation requests by requiring the submission of a statement of the need for the supplemental appropriation and recommendations for cost-savings or other reforms which address the cause of the need of the supplemental appropriation.
- House Bill 855 by Rep. Jim Struzzi would require that beginning in December of a fiscal year, the Budget Secretary would be required to estimate the amount, if any, that revenues for the fiscal year will fall short of the official estimate, and will be required to place that amount in budgetary reserve. Following the IFO mid-year revenue conference, the Budget Secretary's estimate will be revised each month, and the amounts in budget reserve will be adjusted according to each month's revised estimate.
